

Blood ninja shifts

If you want to work on menstruation inclusion: become a blood ninja!

It's a shift of 2 hours where you work in duo to look after 4 menstruation stations, 1 time a day.

As a Blood Ninja you are

- emptying the dirty water bucket
- fill up fresh water from a nearby barrio
- take the trash with you
- make sure the handwashing stations are working

There is a training provided by LNT on Tuesday at 1pm. You can still sign up on FIST or at NoInfo.

There is always room for improvement. Do you have feedback for us on how we can make Nowhere more inclusive for you? Let us know!

Did you have a bad experience and do you want to report this to someone who menstruates who might understand you better? You can mail to our inclusion lead Tilke: tilke@goingnowhere.org

Are you interested to be part of the inclusion team to think and reflect on all of this. Reach out, we would love to hear from you!

Menstruation inclusion

Made for and by people who menstruate at Nowhere!

With so many people on the playa, we are aware quite a bunch of us will be menstruating during the event.

We want Nowhere to be inclusive for menstruating people, no matter if they use pads, a cup or something else. That's why there are the menstruation stations!

They are signed on the map with a tampon.

We have noticed 3 were not enough last year, so we decided to make the accessible toilets also menstruation inclusive. So you will be able to use those too. Signed like this:

What are we doing this year?

At least 3, max 8 menstruation stations

- To access them you need a code, which you can find at NoInfo, Welfare (and backup at Malfare).
- There will be a hand washing station, where you can also clean your cup.
- There will be a waste basket for hygienic products.
- They are regularly cleaned by LNT's blood ninjas

Contact the Inclusion team

inclusion@goingnowhere.org